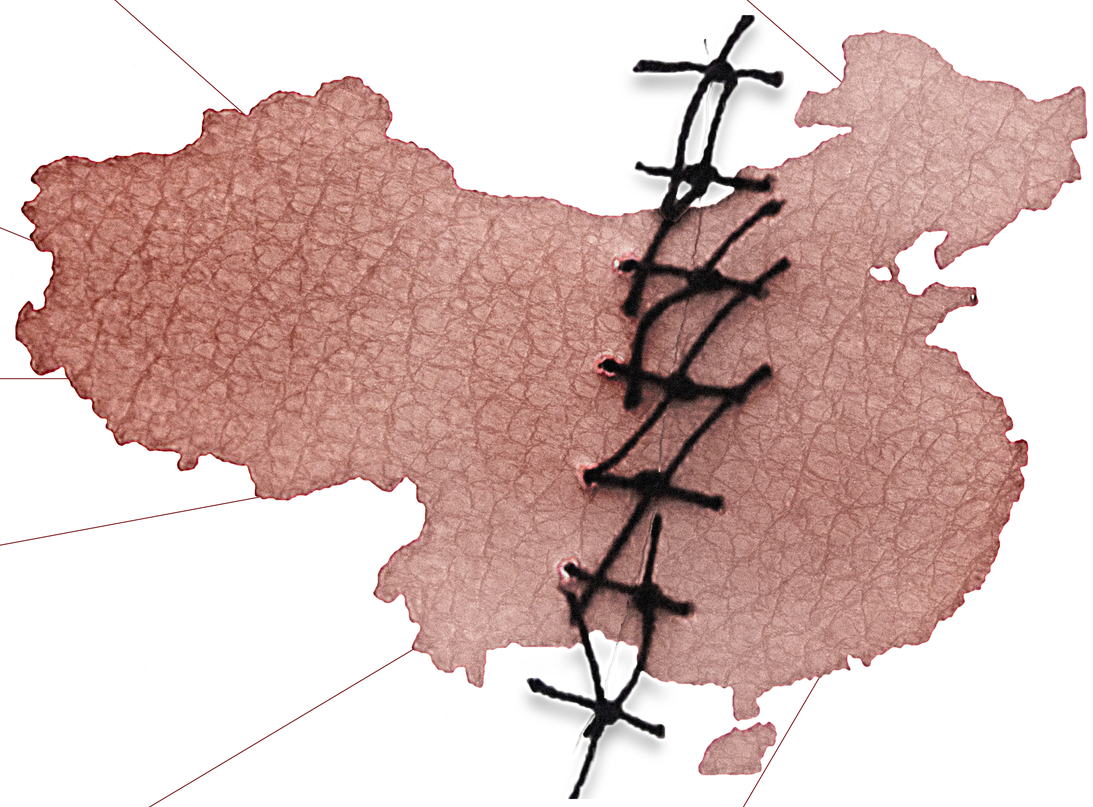
CHINA ORGAN HARVEST RESEARCH CENTER

Official figure of 10,000-15,000 transplants per year significantly understated

On-demand transplants
- Scheduled ahead of time
- Promised in days or weeks
- Taken from living sources

Reform of organ sourcing announced in 2015 not implemented in practice



Voluntary donations cannot supply transplants performed

Most organs still sourced from killing prisoners of conscience, mainly Falun Gong practitioners

Directed by the state with military and civilian involvement

Evidence convinced U.S. Congress and European Parliament to pass resolutions condemning China's organ harvesting

TRANSPLANT ABUSE IN CHINA CONTINUES

China came to perform the most transplants in the world in just a few years after 2000 despite the lack of an organ donation system.

In 2015, Chinese authorities announced that they had stopped sourcing organs from death-row prisoners and completely transitioned to voluntary donors.

The latest research finds that the donation system can supply far fewer organs than transplants performed. The Chinese regime continues to kill prisoners of conscience for organs on demand.

China is now expanding agreements to share organs with other regions in Asia and beyond.
